ABOUT E-COLLOQUIUM

“Human Rights are not a ‘privilege’ conferred by governments. They are every human being’s entitlement by virtue of his humanity.” – Mother Teresa

Human Rights Day is observed every year on 10th of December – the day the United Nations General Assembly adopted, in 1948, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UNDR). The UNDR is a remarkable document, which proclaims the inalienable rights that everyone is entitled to as a human being – regardless of race, sex, colour, religion, language, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, it also stands out to be the most translated document in the world. We celebrate human rights on this day, a day we choose to acknowledge the concept of equality. But we all know, equality is not a tea time gossip, it is a major human rights issue all over the world, from nooks and crannies of it, to the metropolitans. We know, as intellectuals and realists, that idealistic concept of equality is a far-fetched dream, let alone reality. But we also know that as humans, the most advanced and intellectually stimulated species to ever walk this planet, that we can always make things better. If we have the brains and analytical skills to point out that something is wrong with us, we are not far from making efforts to turn things around, only if we want to. We are privileged, well enough to sit and experience, also to hold discussions about the concept of human rights, a topic far away from many years. This year, we and every year from now, may we strive to make this concept a living, breathing reality.
