About the Law Review

The Shimla Law Review is envisioned to be an annual publication, owned and published by the HPNLU, Shimla. The Periodical is intended to provide a forum for faculty members, research scholars, judges, and students. It is not confined to the discipline of law but allows the contributors to take a call on the age-old tradition of legal scholarship. It is open to tread beyond the established modes of reflection or exposition on select central ideas, concepts, tools, and techniques that are evidently integral to or associated the legal academic discourse. SLR believes that the task of legal education institutions is not limited to devising some expedient ideational mechanism to deal with diverse legal issues. It goes beyond and includes deliberations that can affect the society in multifarious ways and support the progressive values that are imbibed in the Constitution. In essence the work of scholarship involves criticizing, revising the existing quantum of information and creating new knowledge. The topography, where the University is located, resembles the terrains of the law and provides the most conducive opportunity for a publication such as the SLR that dwells deeper into the realms and nuances of these terrains of the law and legal system.
